LIVING THE BEST UNI LIFE POSSIBLE

Welcome to uni life

Freshers' Week is a chaotic, exciting, part-terrifying top of a rollercoaster. There's no textbook on meeting your best friends between beers and a silent disco – but this guide is your backpack of tips for the ride.

It's totally normal to feel a mix of buzzing, tired, confused, hyped and awkward – often in the space of ten minutes. Uni is new, and big, and brilliant. You're not doing it wrong if it feels weird at first.

We've all been there – everyone's winging it a bit. But this guide's here to help you feel a bit more ready.

Freshers' Week To-Do List

PRACTICAL

- Register with a GP
- Find the closest shop + pharmacy
- Unpack the necessities and make your bed
- Do a food shop

ON CAMPUS

- Get your student ID
- Go to the Freshers' Fair
- Sign up to at least one society
- Sign up for your uni portal + check email

SOCIAL

- Say hi to your flatmates
- Go to the Freshers' pub quiz or club night
- Make a getting home plan for nights out
- Call home or text someone when you need a reset

How to meet people

1

Eat in the Kitchen, Not Your Room

- Even if you're not cooking a full meal, just make tea or toast in the shared kitchen.
- It naturally sparks conversation: "What are you cooking?" "Where are you from?"

2

Use Your Flat Group Chat (or Start One)

- If your accommodation doesn't already have a group chat, start one.
- Kick it off with something easy like "Anyone up for Tesco run / dinner / drinks?"

3

Talk to People in Your Course Induction

- Sit down next to someone, then casually ask:
 - "Are you doing this module too?"
 - "Have you found the reading list?"

4

Volunteer to Help Out at a Society Stall

- Even if you're not fully joined yet, societies are often happy for extra hands.
- It gives you a reason to talk to lots of people with no pressure.

5

Organise a Shared Flat Breakfast or Pre-drinks

- Doesn't have to be fancy – just bring people together.
 - Cereal party
 - Instant noodles night
 - Cheap cocktails before a club night

Food, Sleep & Avoiding Freshers' Flu

Here's how to take care of your body during Freshers':

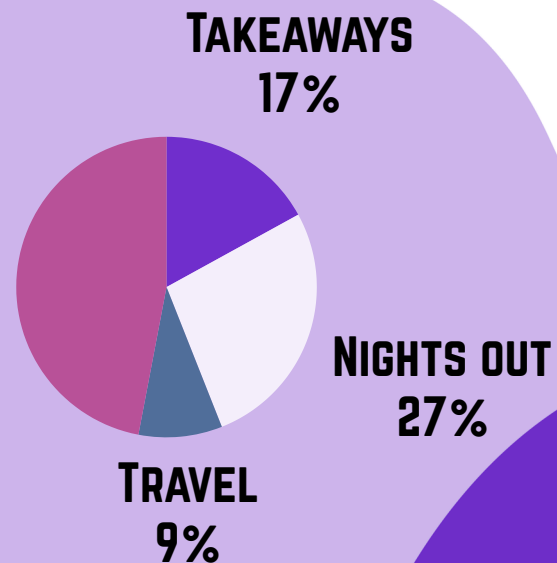

- Drink water between drinks (your brain will thank you)
- Eat something before going out – toast counts
- Keep Lemsip and paracetamol on hand just in case
- Don't skip out on sleep every night
- Have a hoodie or blanket that feels like home
- Buy actual food when doing your first big shop – you'll regret spending it all on vodka and cereal

DON'T UNDERESTIMATE THE POWER OF A PROPER MEAL

AND FULL NIGHT'S SLEEP!

Budget Like a Boss

Most students said their money disappears on groceries...so keeping track of food shopping spends is important!

- 🛒 Don't buy every wristband – research what's actually good
- 🍲 Meal prep once and thank yourself later
- 🎫 Use your student discounts (Unidays, TOTUM, railcards)
- 🛍️ Grab freebies at the Freshers' Fair – loads are useful!
- 📝 Track what you spend in Week 1 – you'll spot patterns fast

Freebie tip: Local takeaways and banks often give out pizza vouchers and pens. Stock up.

Feeling Overwhelmed?

“ A very real issue for us as students – peer pressure plays a big part in why some people, me included, don’t enjoy Freshers’ Week.

Amy Finn, Uni of Salford ”

Freshers' week isn't for everyone - here's 4 reasons why I chose to opt out

Freshers’ isn’t a constant party for everyone – and that’s okay.

You might feel a bit lost, anxious, or even like you’re not fitting in. That doesn’t mean you’re not doing it “right” – it means you’re human.

Take breathers. Say no when you need to. Go for a walk, call a friend, or just watch Netflix in bed.

Freshers’ Week isn’t the peak. It’s just the starting line. You’ve got time.

Remember: Everyone else is figuring it out too, even if they look confident.
